

Fund Objective

The Burney U.S. Factor Rotation ETF seeks long-term capital appreciation

Process & Methodology

Historically, the stock market has favored small-cap and value stocks over the long run, but there were long periods of time where large-caps and growth stocks maintained the performance edge. We believe that when viewed 12-month or 36-month rolling periods, the return differentials appear remarkably patterned. The Burney U.S. Factor Rotation ETF aims to take advantage of these size and style market phases by leaning into the phase we anticipate to be in favor. Here is the current Size and Style breakdown of the ETF.

	Value	Blend	Growth
Large	23	12	16
Mid	12	12	9
Small	4	6	6

While Burney believes the size and style phase of the market is the dominant variable impacting stock market returns, stock selection is also an important piece of the investment strategy. Burney uses its long-time quantitative stock selection modeling process that looks at factors such as Growth, Value, Profitability, Momentum, and Quality to rate individual stocks with an alternative dataset using a company's digital footprint and analyst expectations to inform stock selection.
